Introduction

In today's era of globalization, learning and mastering foreign languages is gaining importance. German is one of the most widely spoken languages in the world, and Germany is one of the leading countries economically, scientifically and culturally. Learning the German language in Uzbekistan creates great opportunities, but there are a number of problems in this process. This article provides a scientifically based analysis of the problems in learning German in Uzbekistan and their solutions.

1. The importance of learning German

Economic opportunities

Germany is one of the important economic partners of Uzbekistan. Germany's achievements in industry, technology and scientific research create great opportunities for Uzbek specialists. Knowing the German language is an important factor for studying, doing an internship or finding a job in Germany. This, in turn, has a positive effect on the economic development of Uzbekistan.

Education and science

Germany has some of the most advanced universities and research institutions in the world. Knowing the German language allows you to study at these universities and participate in scientific research. This is a great opportunity for Uzbek students and researchers.

Cultural relations

German culture has a rich history, and cultural relations between Uzbekistan and Germany are developing. Knowing the German language gives Uzbek citizens the opportunity to get to know German culture and art.

2. The main problems in learning German

Problems in the educational system and lack of teachers

The lack of qualified German language teachers in Uzbekistan is a serious problem. Many teachers do not know the language perfectly or do not have pedagogical experience. This, in turn, has a negative impact on students' language acquisition.

Educational materials

Lack of quality and up-to-date teaching materials for the German language is also a big problem. In many cases, old and outdated textbooks are used, which reduces the quality and efficiency of education.

Problems in schools and higher education institutions

Lessons in schools

In many schools, the German language classes are of low quality and the students do not master the language well. Lessons are mostly theoretical in nature with little emphasis on practice. This does not allow students to develop the skills of using the language in practice.

Higher educational institutions

There are also problems with the teaching of the German language in higher education institutions. The teaching methodology lags behind modern requirements and methods. This limits their students' ability to develop practical language skills.

Problems of motivation and encouragement

Student motivation

Many students are not motivated enough to learn German. This is mainly due to the lack of information about the possibilities and advantages of the German language. When students are faced with difficulties in the learning process, motivation quickly declines.

Incentive system

The incentive system for German language learning is also inadequate. There are few grants, scholarships and other support programs to encourage language learning. This does not encourage students to study the language more deeply.

Technological tools and resources

Lack of technological tools

The lack of modern technological tools and resources makes learning German difficult. Computers, internet and other technological resources are not available in sufficient quantities. This limits the learning process of students.

Online platforms

The limited availability of online learning platforms is also a problem. Many online courses and resources for learning German are either unavailable or of insufficient quality. This does not provide students with additional learning opportunities.

3. Solutions and suggestions

Development of the educational system

Teacher training

Special programs and courses should be organized to improve the skills of German language teachers. Training programs for teachers can be developed and implemented in cooperation with Germany. This, in turn, helps teachers to master the language and use modern teaching methods.

Technological tools and resources

Provision of technological tools

It is necessary to provide schools and higher education institutions with modern technological tools. Computer classes, internet and other technological resources should be available. It enables students to learn the language through the use of modern technology.

Development of online platforms

Online learning platforms should be developed and expanded. There is a need to create more online courses and resources for learning German. This provides students with additional learning opportunities. Also, mobile applications, video lessons and interactive activities will be useful for students.

Digital learning materials

There is a need to expand the creation and use of digital learning materials. E-textbooks, multimedia tools and other digital resources help students to learn the language more effectively. These resources allow students to learn the language independently.

Infrastructure supporting German language learning

Language centres and resource centers

It is necessary to establish special language centers and resource centers for learning the German language. These centers provide additional resources and practice opportunities to help students learn the language. These centers should have language laboratories, libraries and multimedia resources.

Libraries

There is a need to increase German language literature and other resources in libraries. It gives students and learners an opportunity to learn the language through additional materials. Libraries should have German language books, magazines and other literature.

Cultural centers

It is important to support the study of German through cultural centers. Such centers increase students' and students' interest in the language by organizing various activities related to German culture and language. German language courses, seminars and cultural events can be organized through cultural centers.

Special programs and projects

Grants and scholarships

To encourage the study of the German language, it is necessary to introduce a system of grants and scholarships. It encourages students to study the language more deeply. Special grants and scholarship programs can be developed in cooperation with the German Embassy and other organizations.

Uzbekistan-Germany educational exchange programs

It is necessary to develop educational exchange programs between Uzbekistan and Germany. These programs give students and teachers the opportunity to study and gain experience in Germany. Through exchange programs, students and teachers increase their knowledge and experience.

German language research projects

It is necessary to implement research projects on learning and teaching the German language. Through these projects, it is possible to improve the efficiency of German language learning and develop new teaching methods. New textbooks, manuals, and teaching methods can be created through research projects.

Local and international cooperation

Cooperation with the German Embassy and the Goethe Institute
