Introduction

Russian is one of the most popular and sought-after foreign languages in Uzbekistan. In this regard, the methodology of teaching Russian in Uzbek groups plays an important role in teaching students and improving their language skills.

Russian is one of the main goals of teaching Russian in Uzbek groups, which is to develop students' skills of competent communication in Russian. To do this, various techniques are used that contribute to the development of speaking, listening comprehension, reading and writing skills.

One of the main methods of teaching Russian in Uzbek groups is a communicative approach. This approach involves the active participation of students in various communicative situations, which contributes to the development of their oral speech and communication in Russian. In addition, as part of the communicative approach, various games, role-playing games, dialogues and discussions are used to help students apply their knowledge in practice.

Another method of teaching Russian in Uzbek groups is an integrated approach. This approach involves combining various aspects of language learning, such as grammar, vocabulary, phonetics, etc., into a single whole. Thanks to the integrated approach, students can study the Russian language more fully and systematically and learn it better. Russian language teaching methods in Uzbek groups thus play an important role in the formation of communication skills in Russian among students. A variety of techniques, such as a communicative approach and an integrated approach, allow students to effectively teach and help them successfully master the Russian language.

Uzbek groups: relevance and teaching methods

In the modern world, knowledge of foreign languages is becoming increasingly important and necessary for a successful career and communication. In Uzbekistan, as in many other countries, the Russian language occupies a special place as one of the most widespread and sought-after foreign languages. Therefore, learning Russian in Uzbek groups is of great importance and relevance.

One of the key aspects of learning Russian in Uzbek groups is the teaching methodology. To effectively teach students, it is necessary to use various methods that take into account the peculiarities of the language environment and the needs of students.

One of the important methods of teaching Russian is the communicative approach. This approach involves the active participation of students in various communicative situations, which contributes to the development of communication skills in Russian. In addition, the use of games, role-playing games, dialogues and discussions helps students practice the language in practice and improve their skills. Another important method of teaching Russian in Uzbek groups is an integrated approach. This approach combines various aspects of language learning, such as grammar, vocabulary, phonetics, etc., which allows students to study Russian more fully and systematically.

The importance of learning Russian in Uzbek groups is confirmed by research in the field of education. Russian language teaching in Uzbek schools, for example, A.M. Turgunova's study "Problems of teaching Russian in Uzbek schools" (2018) revealed the need to improve the methodology of teaching Russian in Uzbek schools to improve the effectiveness of teaching.

Thus, the place of the Russian language in Uzbek groups is of great importance for the development of students' language skills and their successful adaptation in the modern world. Effective teaching methods such as a communicative approach and an integrated approach play a key role in this process, contributing to the successful development of the Russian language by students from Uzbekistan.

The effectiveness of teaching methods of the Russian language in Uzbek groups may depend on many factors, including the level of training of students, their motivation, the peculiarities of the language environment, etc.

Russian can be especially effective in Uzbek groups:

1. Communicative approach: the active use of communicative tasks, role-playing games, dialogues and discussions helps students practice the language in practice, develop communication skills and increase motivation to learn Russian.
2. Integrated approach: Combining various aspects of language learning, such as grammar, vocabulary, phonetics, etc., helps students to learn Russian more fully and systematically, improving their language skills.
3. Using authentic materials: using real texts, audio and video materials in Russian helps students immerse themselves in the language environment, expand vocabulary and improve their listening comprehension.

4. Interactive learning methods: The use of interactive learning technologies, online resources, games and computer tasks can make the process of learning Russian more exciting and effective for students.

5. Individualized approach: taking into account the individual characteristics and needs of students helps to create personalized curricula, which contributes to more effective learning of the material. These methods can be successfully applied in Uzbek groups to improve the effectiveness of teaching Russian and develop language skills.

Uzbek groups can use a variety of methods of teaching Russian, taking into account the peculiarities of culture, language and education of students from Uzbekistan. Here are some recommendations for effective teaching of the Russian language in Uzbek groups:

1. Using the native language: It is allowed to use Uzbek to explain complex concepts or terms in Russian so that students can better understand the material.

2. Integration of cultural aspects: the inclusion of elements of Uzbek culture, traditions and customs in the educational process will help students better understand and assimilate the Russian language. Russian Russian

3. Taking into account differences in language structures: explaining the differences between Uzbek and Russian languages (for example, in grammar, vocabulary, phonetics) will help students avoid mistakes and better understand the peculiarities of the Russian language.

4. Speaking practice: focusing on speaking practice, conducting dialogues, role-playing games and discussions will help students improve their communication skills in Russian.

5. Using authentic materials: using real texts, audio and video materials in Russian will help students immerse themselves in the language environment and develop listening comprehension skills.

6. Individualized approach: Taking into account the individual needs and level of knowledge of each student will help create personalized curricula and ensure more effective learning.

7. Using modern technologies: using online resources, language learning applications, interactive tasks and games will help make the learning process more interesting and effective for students.

In conclusion, it can be noted that the methodology of teaching Russian in Uzbek groups plays an important role in the formation of language skills and cultural understanding. The development of communication skills, the use of interactive techniques and an individual approach to each student allow you to overcome language difficulties and increase motivation to learn Russian.
